Alsike protests prison opening

By David Hedley

The unanimous opening of a minimum security correctional institute near Alsike is raising her among some area residents.

The scheduled addition treatment centre at Alsike that closed in March has been re-opened as an extension of the Fort Saskatchewan Correctional Institute.

Inmates transferred to Alsike are near the end of prison sentences and have no history of violent or sexual assaults, assistant director Tim Leslie-Spinkis said Wednesday.

"They have demonstrated they no longer need to be incarcerated," he said. "They get a bit more responsibility, a few more privileges, as well as an opportunity to do a work schedule."

He said no new security systems or fences will be installed, and no plans are in place to enlarge the facility from its present capacity of 18 inmates. The first five inmates arrived Wednesday, with eight correctional officers on hand to receive them.

Area resident Willie Bate said he object to the way the government handled the use of the facility without notifying the community.

"They just dropped it in on us. It leaves a bad taste in your mouth."

Leslie-Spinkis denied the government was trying to keep the project a secret. He said the transfer of ownership from the Alberta Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Commission to the solicitor general's department couldn't be completed and announced until the government's 1984 budget was released.

The arrival of inmates at Alsike came eight days after the Alberta government announced the budget.

Bate said he thinks the government should have made more effort to sell the idea to local residents.

"They're doing this now, what are they going to do two years from now? I want to find out more things about it."

Bate's brother Allen, another area resident, said he doubts the statement that Alsike inmates present no risk to the community.

Cubs score on drive

Cubs Nicholas Favett, 5 and Jeremy Morgan, 5, were on hand Saturday to help with the annual Cub leader drive. With the help of parents and volunteers, the local Scouting group managed to collect more than 1000 in bottles, cans and donations which will go toward general operation of the Scout association, including camping trips, badges and day-to-day operation.

Tenders come in low

By Jack Morrison

Drayton Valley received a pleasant surprise while opening construction tenders for the new indoor swimming pool.

All together 15 tenders were submitted ranging from a high of $1.50 million to a low of $688,200 for the construction of the pool with all the amenities such as tilting and whirlpool.

The average price was approximately $600,000.

With all Major Cultural Recreation Facility grant program, town, county and donation dollars present, funding for the indoor swimming pool runs at $1,251,785.10.

"I was pleasantly surprised at the tenders," said Charlie Miner, deputy mayor. The lower bid the opportunity now to reassess the swimming pool situation and get as much as possible with the funds available.

"But we don't want to get any kind of wild ideas or carried away with the attitude the tenders came in lower than expected," he added.

"The town's position at this point is not to choose a contractor before sitting down with administration and the consultant (CAMHCO) to take a look at all avenues open," said Miner.

When asked what implications the low tenders bids would have on donations, Miner refused to comment.

There are problems involved, Miner conceded, adding that in addition to the tender, consultant fees have to be paid and the lot must be awarded.

Many uses for extra money

While Thursday's bargain basement prices for the construction of Drayton Valley's indoor swimming pool are a boon, they also cause problems for our town council.

What our elected representatives are now faced with is reallocating and redistributing funds which were earmarked for the facility but now are no longer necessary.

Initial indications are that there will be a surplus of several hundred thousand dollars — enough to provide a variety of recreational amenities.

Firstly, for the pool we could have a multi-purpose room for an additional $100,000; there are also plans available for a sun deck, as well as landscaping and a larger parking lot.

Increasing the size of the pool to five or six lanes is also an obvious possibility, but it should be recognized that the operating costs of the facility would increase accordingly.

Going beyond the pool there are numerous ramifications within the fundraising sector as to what to do with projects set up to help build the pool and ones which have already contributed money to the fund.

Town council will have to make a decision as to how the excess funds will be disbursed. Possibilities include returning them to the original funding groups and individuals, or using them to enhance our recreational facilities.

The arena could use a sprucing-up, and more ball diamonds are in the works. A new library would be nice, and a multi-cultural centre would be nice.

Drayton Valley is also sadly lacking in programs for its youthful population. With the number of youths we have we could put money to good use in giving them productive outlets.

All of the above ideas are only a few of the many which our citizens will think of. There should be enough money to go around so that everyone could benefit to some degree. But the question is at what point would the extra funds be spread too thin and the benefits negated.

Town council is faced with a situation similar to that of winning a lottery — they control the purse strings and have to decide what to do with all the money for the good of the people.

There will be many questions arising from this situation and it should be recognized that town council is faced with making a number of difficult decisions.

"Out helping the government overcome inflation again, dear?"

Ball volunteers deserve credit

It's good to see the response to the request for an executive for Drayton Valley's minor baseball association. It would have been a shame if the 400 children looking forward to playing would have been unable to participate.

How many of us who played had someone to coach and organize for us when we were youngsters? Those people who stepped forward to pick up the slack deserve thanks for their actions.

Tourism is on the agenda for this evening's Chamber of Commerce dinner meeting, and it may be the most important one to date.

That isn't to say that the others have been unimportant — don't read me wrong.

Editor's Notes

But one of the things which makes this meeting so important is that we need to become aware of what it is we have to offer tourists.

Basically we have to be sold on the idea before we can even think of trying to sell other people on it. That's what makes this meeting so important; tourism is a potential we already have and all we have to do is make ourselves aware of that potential in order to take advantage of a major resource.

Should wine and beer sales be allowed in grocery stores?

Don Lyne
Drayton Valley
No. We can get wine and beer every enough from the grocery stores. There's too much of it around anyway.

Don Plett
Rocky Mountain
No. I don't want to see a grocery store become a liquor store. There's too much of it around anyway.

Rick Baker
Drayton Valley
Yes. Beer sales, right? They've closed down liquor stores three days ago saying it's the grocery stores that offend the community.

Tom Lyne
Tombstone
As long as it's not alcohol, I don't see the community might be of any type of thing. It would be easier for them to get alcohol if it is sold in stores.

Charles Herring
Winnipeg
I don't know. They can always take it off.

Well, you magnificent eight, it looks like we've got a ratings war on our hands.

Are there via the plumbing it all connects to the water tower, you know that town council's individual meetings are drawing audience proportions almost as high as your favorite kid's column.

Okay, there are eight of you loyal readers out there who know that and says that. But now there's a new kid on the block who says at least six or seven locals are watching town council every three weeks.

The closer for comfort, ladies. Something must be done.

Firstly, we have to get to know our competition.

Just who are these people, and how do they compare to our little group?

How did they arrive at these figures? Do friends and relatives count?

Do the same six or seven people watch town council on the local tube EVERY three weeks? Or is there a group of folks who take turns — you know, three months on, three months off?

What kind of demographics are we looking at for this audience? How old, or how young are they, and do they watch the whole thing?

Where do they shop? Are they allowed to shop?

Have they made any major purchases in the past year, and if so, what is a major purchase?

Something else Ace would like to get a handle on is what sort of TV shows are being missed in favor of Ace. How would those guys do if they had to run up against real competition like Hammy Hamster?

We've got a problem on our hands, and we're going to have to meet this beast head on, or it could go badly for us. Think of the embarrassment if we were blown out of the water by a television show.

Ace suggests a word of mouth campaign. Tell a friend who will tell a friend, and you know the rest.

Now, not all of you will want to admit that you know about this bird who lives on the water tower.

Ace's View
from the water tower and writes this silly little column for the Wacky Review.

But hey, it's okay. Ace understands, so maybe you have to be rather strenuous about the whole thing and get a new bit mostly at the same time.

So, try starting them off with something they like asking, "Do you think kids can write?" — find 'em out a bit to get an idea what kind of a head space they're in.

After a little practice you should be able to pick out the ones you want to try out the next question on which Ace suggests should be, "Ever hear of a raven trying to make a living at writing."

At this point be wary of faltered interest. Pleading this right now, you may never know when someone might infiltrate from the other side once we get the ball rolling.

Still proceeding with a degree of caution you'll then be ready to pop with, "Do you know how much it costs to rent a water tower?"

That question is the kicker. Listen very carefully and see if their reply makes sense.

If it does, then fire home with, "How would you like to read the mail and ravings of a water tower-dwelling raven — for a small fee?"

If they're still with you after that one then lend 'em, because you know they're hooked good.

Next week will feature a two-part conclusion of our ratings war series which will describe not only how to make a money mental, but also how to drink one, and then what to do for the hangover.

Suicide will affect 42,000 Albertans in 1984

By Jack Morrison

Most people who commit suicide do not want to die.

The people who think about and the people who go on to commit suicide may be anyone, said Pat Orrell, suicide and bereavement counsellor.

It is something that cuts across all social and educational groups, she added.

A pamphlet published by the Canadian Mental Health Association states that suicide is now the second most frequent cause of death among young Canadians between the ages of 15 and 24.

In Metropolitan Toronto, there are an average of six suicides a week. And for every attempt, there are several successful attempts.

"It is almost at epidemic proportions"

Compared to other provinces such as Nova Scotia and the eastern seaboard where the rate has at approximately 100 per 100,000, Alberta, at approximately 17 per 100,000, is almost three times the national average.

"It is almost at epidemic proportions," said Rev. Bob Aldrich, United Church minister about the suicide rate in the Drayton Valley area. According to the records of the United Church, Aldrich has recorded five known suicide victims and personally known of an additional six in the last two years.

If the number is actually 14 in the last two years, that is an "epidemic" since the average is 35,000, when the national average is less than five, he added.

There is a high possibility that each and every one of us will know one person who has attempted or completed suicide, said Jim Wolff, Frank Maddock High School student counsellor.

"That occurs a lot of people even using conservative figures," he added.

Orrell pointed out during a suicide seminar held in Drayton Valley April 4, more than 42,000 Albertans will be affected by suicide in 1984 alone.

A person who attempts suicide cries out for help. They do not have the personal resources to go through a crisis, said Jim Wolff, Frank Maddock High School student counsellor.

Because of depression they are unable to consider the other ways to get freedom or whatever the motivation is. They don't know what to do.

Alberta's suicide rate highest

More than 42,000 Albertans were affected by suicide in 1982.

There is a high probability that each and every one of us will know one person who has attempted or completed suicide, said Jim Wolff, Frank Maddock High School student counsellor.

"That covers a lot of people even using conservative figures," he added.

There were approximately 400 people in Alberta last year who committed suicide. Family members affected by those suicides number more than 2,000. The number of people who attempted suicide last year was about 600 per 100,000. That translates to 10,000 people last year alone who attempted to commit suicide.

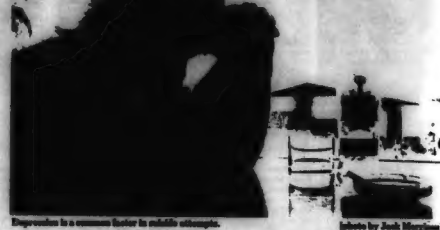

If that number was multiplied by a conservative estimate of three family members or friends affected by the suicide and all of the numbers were added up, more than 42,000 people were affected by suicide in the last year, said Pat Orrell, suicide and bereavement counsellor.

"That figure does not affect people affected last year, nor the people affected 10 years ago," she added.

If the unemployment rate increases one per cent the suicide rate increases by four per cent two years later, Drayton Valley is at that point right now, Wolff said.

The suicide rate in Alberta is probably the highest rate in the country, Orrell said.

Compared to other provinces such as Nova Scotia and the eastern seaboard where the rate

Depression is a common factor in suicide attempts.

People who are suicidal don't want to die. Suicide is the vehicle they use to get freedom. It is hard for people who are suicidal to reach out and get help. They have lost the capability of being able to change their world to make it capable of living it.

"Some think they are going crazy"

The symptoms of suicide are difficult to differentiate from clinical depression. Part of the symptomatology is a rapid change in mood state, fluctuating from euphoria to rapid depression, explained Wolff.

Depressed people have a tendency to withdraw from family and friends. Sleeping and eating patterns may alter. They live in a very small world consisting of only themselves and may not know they are depressed. In fact some think they may be going crazy, Orrell said.

She added that of those who commit suicide are approximately six per 100,000, Alberta is approximately 17 per 100,000; almost three times the national average.

"It is almost at epidemic proportions," said Rev. Bob Aldrich about the suicide rate in the Drayton Valley area. According to records of the United Church, Aldrich has recorded five known suicide victims and personally known of an additional six.

But according to the medical examiner's office in Calgary, the suicide rate for the Drayton Valley area rests in the neighbourhood of five to six.

Both Wolff and Aldrich suspect the reason for the discrepancy can be attributed to a death being initially classified as accidental, not suicidal and when it is eventually discovered the statistics had never been changed over.

"Since many suicides are not reported as such, experts believe the true number is considerably higher," stated a pamphlet published by the Canadian Mental Health Association. Suicide is now the second most frequent cause of death among young Canadians between the ages of 15 and 24, it continued.

In the United States suicide has become the number one national health priority problem. The reason for that, said Wolff, is communicable diseases have decreased and health standards have increased, thereby reducing the number of deaths so that suicide has become a leading cause.

People contemplating suicide feel unable to "work it out" to see if anyone is concerned, Orrell explained.

Individuals who want to kill themselves are suicidal for only a limited period of time. It saved lives.

65 per cent are depressed, and 15 per cent of the population who are depressed will kill themselves. There are some common clues connected with a person who has suicidal tendencies. Threats, preparation of final arrangements such as wills, giving away possessions, improvement in mental state and behavior changes, listed Orrell.

Suicide victims are unable to cope with issues they have experienced. As more issues occur they find it harder and harder to cope. They think they are worthless and their life is empty.

But this does not mean they did not love their wife or children, Orrell said.

The high risk age for males is from 18 to 29 and then over 65. For females the high risk years range from 40 to 64, Orrell said.

Four times as many men kill themselves as women. Adolescents with suicidal moods often use a variety of non-lethal ways. Adolescents buy attempt suicide less often but have a higher completion rate.

With males suicide is usually violent. Females choose non-violent methods.

Married people commit suicide far less often. Single males are the highest contributors of suicide, Wolff said.

In approximately 90 per cent of the suicides school or drugs are present in the system, he added.

"People use drugs for strength to complete the attempt."

Myth: 'people who talk about it don't do it'

There are a number of myths surrounding suicide, said both Aldrich and Orrell.

Those myths are: suicide victims always leave a note; they don't really mean to kill themselves; they are just looking for attention; people who talk about it don't do it; once a person is suicidal, he is suicidal forever; improvement following a suicidal crisis means that the suicide risk is over; and ignore it and it will go away.

"Not very many people leave notes," Orrell said.

In fact 80 per cent of the people who kill themselves do talk about it. But, they are not always going to be direct about it. Quite often people are indirect about the verbal clues they give such as, "People would be a lot happier if I wasn't around," she said.

People contemplating suicide feel unable to "work it out" to see if anyone is concerned, Orrell explained.

Individuals who want to kill themselves are suicidal for only a limited period of time. It saved

Talking helps solve suicide crisis situation

from self-destruction, they can go on and lead useful lives.

But as improvement in mental state following a suicidal crisis does not mean the suicidal risk is over. The counsellor that appears generally means that person has come to a decision to end their problems.

It is very dangerous to ignore a suicide threat, said Orrell. Even a mild suicidal attempt indicates a desperate need for sympathy and understanding. If help isn't forthcoming, a more serious attempt may follow.

The biggest weapon is the one against suicide is the average person, Aldrich said.

"It is dangerous to ignore a suicide threat."

Ordinary people can deal with suicide better than a professional, said Aldrich. "How can you deal with suicide through official channels? — you can't. I don't think any of us can deal with it. Ordinary people can deal with it better."

The only way to find out if a person has suicide on their mind is to ask them. The likelihood is that they will tell you their plans.

Sensitivity is a key. People need to learn to read the subtle signs suicidal people give out, said Rev. Cecil Davidson, Anglican minister.

One way to help those in danger and caring to that person by being around them, he added.

There is no point in intervening in a suicide unless you care for that person, she cautioned. People who are suicidal are not very trusting.

But most of the time people will answer questions truthfully. How long have you been thinking this way? Have you got a plan?

A person who has a plan is in a lot more danger.

People with suicide on their minds are ambivalent about dying. They experience both wanting to die and not wanting to die at the same time. That ambivalence means a person has an opportunity to intervene.

When intervening it is important not to judge that person by your own standards, she stressed. Their problems may seem minuscule to you but they are problems that person cannot cope with.

Also you cannot judge the suicide as a sin. The great danger of helping that person is you think you have the answer. One of the greatest gifts is to listen to them. People want someone who will just listen.

"People are scared to death about it."

A lot of people when they talk about suicide are frightened about their feelings anyone. They experience a release of tension just by talking about it, she said.

One of the things that can be done to prevent suicide is to bring it out into the open and talk about it, said Orrell.

Suicides are not things people like to talk about, said Rev. Bob Aldrich, United Church minister. "Quite frankly people are scared to death about it."

Drayton Valley has a problem when it comes to a potential suicide victim who wants to call someone anonymously. Because of the small town the victim feels everyone would know of their

But there are a number of areas a person with suicidal tendencies can call if they need to talk such as the family doctor, social services, or the clergy.

Antares Inc. in Edmonton operates 24 hours a day and accepts anonymous calls. The number is 425-4222.

Students' lessons cut

Elementary school students here had their school swimming program cut short this year because of the new indoor swimming pool.

Recreation director Dennis Wesley explained he'd be hiring indoor pool staff as early as October, and he "had to cut back somewhere" so the outdoor pool won't be opening until about June 11 this year. Last year the pool opened May 14, giving the pupils six weeks of instruction compared with only two weeks this year.

Pool manager Debbie Delger said the 35 classes involved here have been divided in half and each class will receive 45 minutes of instruction a day for five days.

The qualified Red Cross instructors will divide the children into five or six groups, each concentrating on a particular area such as elementary backstroke or diving.

"A little bit of everything will be touched—just whatever they need help on," she said. The children or their parents will select the areas they feel need improving. Fifty children at a time will be in the pool receiving instruction.

Last year pupils had the opportunity to work toward their colors, but there wasn't enough time this year. Classes from Grade 1 and up from St. Anthony, Elementary 3 and 4 students will be involved in the program.

Grades 1 and 2 classes will be given first shot at booking the pool for their year-end parties.

The vote stalls MPC member selection

Two dozen were out for public hearings on the new land use bylaw which deals with zoning in town and needs updating, according to Miller.

"It's more a broadening of the situation," he said, to make the bylaw more straightforward and "easier to live with" for both the town and its residents.

The first hearing is May 8 at 7:30 p.m., a regularly scheduled MPC meeting, and the second is June 8 at 7:30 p.m., a regularly scheduled Committee of the Whole meeting concerning all councilors will be present.

At the next MPC meeting, June 12, the results of the hearings will be reviewed and if changes are minor, the bylaw will be presented to council.

The Municipal Planning Committee (MPC) is still short a member after a vote on the two applicants in town council Thursday resulted in a tie so only six councilors were present. This is the second meeting council has tried to select a new member, as two attempts at the March 13 meeting also resulted in the vote.

"I would have liked to have had a member for our meeting next Tuesday, but we're operational," said MPC chairman Charlie Miller.

Recreation director Dennis Wesley was given council's approval for a meeting between the Drayton Valley recreation board and the County of Lake County.

The meeting "may accomplish an understanding of similar concerns," Wesley explained. Miller said the idea was well workable but recommended a discussion of the new indoor pool not be one of the purposes of the meeting, though discussion was "fine" if the subject came up.

Councillors concerned over newspaper report

By Josh Matthews and Frankie Thorsell
During the recreation board report to town council Thursday, several councillors voiced their concern over a story in The Western Review they said misled the town and was not an indoor swimming pool.

Deputy Mayor Charlie Milner lambasted a March 30 story headlined, Pool fund at minimum level, saying the story "says to me that there is a big amount of doubt, we are not going to end up with a pool, and that's not true."

The story stated, "The town now has enough funds to build the indoor pool but still needs another $200,000 to complete the facility with amenities later." It went on to explain through recreation director Dennis Weasley, "We are now in a position to build a basic pool." The additional funding would go toward extras such as tiling and a whirlpool.

"In all fairness that wasn't intended," explained Weasley, at the council meeting. "The thought there was that it has been advertised throughout the town of having agreed a $1.4 million pool can be developed and that the inclusion we would desire to make it a better quality system and pool we going to cost this much. The intent there was just to indicate to the public that we're at the basic level of inclusion today. And hopefully will develop into the next inclusion stages as more donations are required."

"My concern over it is, primarily, all of us all, we have all of the details on all of the funding and packaging," said Milner. "The public at large does not have all of those details, and I am concerned that they read something like this and say, 'Hey, if we don't get a whole bunch more donation money we're not going to get a pool' and that is not correct."

"Maybe I am being a little over apprehensive or overly concerned, but I think we need to be pretty careful how this stuff gets put out and presented. If we allow the public to get the idea that unless they get up their rear and contribute a whole bunch of money we are not going to have an indoor swimming pool we're in trouble because that is not the intent or purpose to start with at all," Milner continued.

"We had two public meetings, we've had a great deal of publicity through our newspaper and all that publicity basically stated to people that $1.4 million will include this and it will be developed if you want to see the other inclusion it will cost this amount of money," said Weasley.

"I think, primarily, we can't make the assumption that the public knows everything there is to know about it because in truth they don't," the deputy mayor said.

"It is crucial if we are developing something like this media to provide to the public something clearly stating the fact," said Weasley.

"For my part, Dennis, I don't know what to suggest to you. I don't have a whole lot of suggestions for communication but I think it is important. My concern is we don't get a misleading trust going," Milner said.

Councillor Tom McGee agreed with Milner. "The only comment I have is if we go back to the public and say we can have a pool we don't want them to not say a certain pool is a certain pool. We do need their donations for the tile and that so we are not of adding time we are not adding the public for the pool or say some money we are asking them to provide some of the money to add the hardware we can have some hardware there," he said.

"The same time we don't want to print something that says all well we are going to have the pool, no problem. There isn't any problem and we are really there. I don't know how you are going to print it except for an answer now for the tile or serve who are watching. I think we should be looking at something back to the media through the use of the paper. I agree with your concerns and I never picked up on that particular headline."

'Not our intent' to mislead public — Olsen

until you sort of showed it just there and I thought it was a big difference. The public voted and here we are all of a sudden we can't do it without saying we have money and sound like a waste of time for the last six, seven months ..." he concluded.

"... Or more," added Milner. "I think that is my concern."

"I just want to make a comment in agreement with what you have said, Charlie. I think the message is getting out we have misled the public and that was not our intent. We could, we will and we had better build that pool for 1.4 million dollars," said Councillor Howard Olson.

"I don't feel his public deserved to feel that they have been misled or have a humiliated hold in their hand. I would like to see the pool complete with everything, I hope that is the way it comes. But, the pool will be there regardless and I think that is the part we have to get through," he added.

Later, Milner said he was trying to express his concern as an "individual."

"People tend to think over stuff, he said, adding his concern was that there may be a lot of misinterpretation without all of this facts present. Milner indicated he perhaps jumped the gun considering council was scheduled to open tomorrow for the construction of the pool that afternoon.

"In view of the tender prices starting as low as they did my concern over total dollars was premature," he said.

My concern was more complete total information and a shortage of information leads to speculation and misinterpretation.

When asked why he allowed two weeks to pass and not approach The Western Review for clarification or to voice his concern, Milner answered, "I can't give you a running or an answer."

While the last day or two before the council meeting the town "gave up" into my mind.

"I didn't really come to council with full intent of going into it," he said, adding that when recreation director Dennis Weasley was giving the recreation board report on the swimming pool it was an opportune time to express his concern.

'Fine animals' make livestock sale successful

The grand champion bull at the Western Alberta Livestock Breeders' Association 18th Annual Bull and Female Show and Sale, George Anshel's Tri-A Blue Banner (TP) brought $2,000 on the auction block Saturday at the Bransburg farm.

The bull was purchased by Bruce Bennett of Pook.

Land sale good for Drayton Valley

The sale of more than half an acre in the Tucker subdivision may indicate economic times are turning around.

The town has owned this 136-acre subdivision since 1980 when it was purchased for the town by Alberta Resources.

Over 600 people turned out for the show which concluded with opening day of the Bransburg Farmers' Market. The market provided a free pancake breakfast for everyone present.

Buyers from as far away as Regina were attracted to the sale conducted by Ron Underhills Auctioneers. The two-year-old bull was a land banking program. The move then $1,500,000 debt (with interest) will come due in 1990.

average of $1,000 was $254 above last year's.

"We were very surprised at our average," said Peter Kowalski, secretary/treasurer of the association. "We know that our market was under pressure this year and we feel that the sale did that of the rest of the province."

He attributed the success of the sale to the "fine animals" brought in by breeders from as far as Tuleville, Alberta, and also to the move away from Drayton Valley. "We've topped a good market," he said, and added the town of Bransburg "gave us an all out effort."

The grand champion female entry was Bob Taylor's Japanese 405 and brought $2,000 from Gordon Nelson of Hargreaves.

The Government of Canada recognizes the fact that all Canadians must work together in partnership if Canada is to grow and prosper. This is particularly important now as a time when the economy is recovering and new opportunities are available.

Budget 84 is designed to allow us to contribute to this climate and to provide the economic opportunity and security all Canadians seek.

A fair tax system supports a strong and healthy environment, particularly with regard to environmental, pension and income taxes. And, currently payments are being estimated for some 500,000 individual Canadians.

Budget 84 involves YOU

- ☞ If you're a taxpayer
- ☞ a pensioner
- ☞ a woman
- ☞ a small business owner
- ☞ a farmer
- ☞ a homeowner or homebuyer
- ☞ a worker

Greater Pension Security
Women, senior citizens and farmers in particular will benefit from increased pension security. New pension legislation will allow all Canadians better opportunities to save for their retirement.

Home Sale - Tax Savings
In order to encourage the continuation of family farms, new legislation will be introduced that will help farmers to provide for their retirement adequately.

The Mortgage Rate Protection Program
This program will be introduced to enable homeowners and homeowners to buy protection against extraordinary increases in mortgage rates.

$120 Million Subsidies to Federal State for Small Business
The net result of simplification of small business tax laws, as well as new initiatives and provisions for growing small businesses, will mean a tax saving for small and medium sized businesses of some $150 million.

Profit Participation
Employee Profit Participation Plans will assist Canadian workers and managers to build a more productive and competitive economy. The budget proposes to encourage profit sharing with a special tax credit that would be shared between employers and employees. These are just a few of the important provisions of Budget 84 that benefit us all. The Government of Canada needs your participation to help build for the future. Get involved.

Herbicide ban could cost farmers

Canadian farmers could face an increase in crop production costs amounting to more than $80 million per year if the phenoxy herbicides R&D and MCPA are banned. These are the conclusions of a report prepared by Agriculture Canada on the economic benefits to agriculture of the herbicides.

Dr. Moe Hazal, pesticide issues co-ordinator with Alberta Agriculture, points out that because R&D and MCPA were registered in the late 1950s they are currently undergoing additional safety tests to bring them in line with today's requirements. Following completion of the tests, the results will be evaluated by Health and Welfare Canada to determine their future use.

The federal report indicates that if only R&D is banned, farmers are likely to react to the use of MCPA. MCPA is slightly more expensive than R&D and would cause an increase in farmers' production costs of nearly $5 million per year. Losses from reduced crop yields and quality are expected to be minor. However, if R&D is banned, MCPA will probably also be banned because the two herbicides belong to the same chemical family and thus have a similar molecular structure.

If R&D and MCPA are banned, farmers could use bromoxynil and dicamba, both of which are much more expensive than the phenoxy herbicides. The report estimates that farmers would pay an additional $8 million per year to treat crops with bromoxynil or dicamba. And additional losses due to a decrease in crop production and reduced grain quality would be incurred.

The report suggests that if only Canada were to ban the two phenoxy herbicides, grain farmers in this country would have to bear the brunt of the increased costs and would suffer severe economic losses. On the other hand, if other countries, especially the United States, were to join in the ban, consumers in the importing countries, as opposed to Canadian farmers,

Flower drying cheap, time-consuming hobby

Multi-colored clusters of drying flowers hang side by side with bunches of liberty bells with full in Sylvia Round's hallway.

Perhaps one of the cheaper, but more time-consuming hobbies, flower drying is a craft Round grew up with—her father did the gardening and her mother arranged the flowers into delicate bouquets.

"Your own time and the price of the made" are the only costs, the Violet Grove area resident said. She admits to being a "basic about and compulsion" to order from five different stores and like in her different garden each year.

Plants that can be used in dried arrangements are almost unlimited. The only restriction besides one's imagination is to stick with types that won't disintegrate after being dried. One of Round's larger bouquets includes several varieties of ornamental grasses, colorful straw flowers, statice, wheat, oats, bearded barley, poppy pods, yarrow, wild grass and weeds, monardella pods, lavender, eucalyptus and baby's breath.

She grows two sizes of straw flowers but because she picks them at different stages of growth, ends up with many sizes for her bouquets, ranging from as small as a dime to as large as a silver dollar. If picked while in bud, the flower will open just a little before drying.

Round has given away most of her bouquets as gifts since she started pursuing the hobby seriously five years ago and friends admired her "handwork".

Of all her hobbies, "I like gardening the best," she said. "I love flowers."

Sylvia checks the flowers to see if they're dry.

Straw flowers that crisp and brittle even before they've been dried, but the stems are like those of other flowers. They're hung upside down so the heads won't droop.

Round starts the seeds off indoors in early April, then begins to harden off the young plants in June, waiting until mid-June to plant them so they are delicate when young. After that she cultivates and weeds them just as she would any other garden flower.

"They're dead perennials," Round said. "I have them dried in the winter and in the garden in the summer." Straw flowers need full sunlight all day long to thrive.

She picks the flowers at first frost as the stems may with if frozen and hangs them in bunches of six for about a month in a cool, dry, dark place after stripping all the leaves off the stems.

"However the flowers look" determines how she arranges them—there's no planning in advance.

A large bouquet will take two hours of work which she prefers to do all at once because "it makes quite a mess," Round has given away most of her bouquets as gifts since she started pursuing the hobby seriously five years ago and friends admired her "handwork".

Of all her hobbies, "I like gardening the best," she said. "I love flowers."

'Dead battery' charged

Learning is something unto itself, philosophized Howard Bedford, a nine-year-old Grade 2 Edworthy student.

"School is not like everything else; you have to work in and work out. It is really fun being in school because I get to learn. It's learning that counts," said Howard.

Although he has had his doubts about Howard's policy well at the moment, he said, "I feel this is a dead battery," but after a talk with the school guidance counselor he added he now feels "recharged."

"It is all right to fail; it is learning that counts," said Howard, revealing what he had learned after his talk with the counselor.

School is not the only activity that occupies his time. "I like art. I do paper modelling," he said, adding he also likes to read books.

"The hardest book I ever read was the Bible. I could read it. Everyone is reading it. I can read it. The Bible isn't hard (although) there are some words I couldn't get on a test," he said.

In the area of sports Howard said he likes watching horse racing and motocross. In fact, he owns a BMX bicycle. But sports do not dominate his television watching activity. Programs that rank high on his list include The Flintstones, Popeye and Olive Oyl, Knight Rider and the A-Team.

Howard could be his three parts. Two parts are a dog. One out is called Garfield, he said, adding "Garfield is very special." The other out is called Mamma Kitty. Garfield likes and takes swipes at Mamma Kitty, he said.

Howard's dog is called Blue (pronounced like the Madonna name). "This is the most playful dog. He is so ugly he looks cute," Howard described.

Fire destroys Evansview school

By Liz Lamer
727-2673

Residents of Evansview awoke April 2 to see black clouds of smoke hovering high over the village. A landmark that has existed in the village for over 50 years was soon to be gone forever.

The Evansview Elementary Junior High School closed for doors to teachers and students a year and a half ago. The classrooms of the junior high school were built in 1947, while the midsection was added in 1957.

When the close-up of the site is completed the land will be offered for sale.

Two and a half years ago the assistant principal of Evansview School, Don Barry, undertook the project of investigating and developing plans for a creative playground for Evansview School. What started out as a small school project has become a large community project.

Use perfume and silk to pamper yourself

By Joanne Berger

We are in month four days short of full moon and the moon is in the sign of Leo. You will never feel more important or loved in your own greatness, no matter that the rest of the world is to recognize what you are.

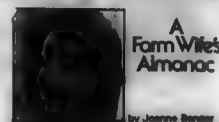

Travel and party and enjoy yourself. You deserve to enjoy yourself. This is the time to use that expensive bottle of perfume or to sleep in those real silk pyjamas you got last Christmas. It is also the time to shop for your new outfit. Buy a linen suit and you will remain in it so long it will become an ancestral home to those who come after you.

April 12 and 14 will be in the sign of the zodiac sign of Virgo and increasing. The king has become the servant. Cautious and tidying up your home (previously mentioned as a candle) is recommended now.

Work up on health foods and write and mail letters and Easter cards.

New beginnings of the month are the rule of the day so sign contracts, make arrangements, start new jobs or begin studies. If you get married now, consider a marriage contract. Include the clean-up type clause and who's responsible for them or otherwise your partner's lack of maintenance might suit you.

This is the sign under which lights burn over things like who exposed the toothpaste tube in the middle and who left the bar of soap to turn into a greasy gel in a soap dish full of water.

April 13 moon in color fall moon and it also goes to enter the wonderful, harmonious sign of Libra.

Color rules Libra and the moon is aptly called the full pink moon for the earliest flowers of spring should be showing pink blossoms now.

Do Easter baking, color eggs with their and party. Pre-Easter parties will really exceed this weekend.

April 17 and 18 will be in the third quarter and Scorpio. This is the time for eating and preserving so prepare Easter meat suits.

Harvest money if you want. Think up with medicines for yourself and the animal.

Have teeth filled and get a new haircut for Easter.

When baby week is it?

Baptism is still the baby sign with forward birthdays falling between Nov. 30 and Dec. 7 until April 16 and between Dec. 8 and 18 the rest of the week. The baby number to remember is eight, the number of earthly triumph, which is solid and complete. When eight is favored the babies are equal so it holds a favorable balance.

Important days this week

April 15 is Palm Sunday. Modern modern transportation in areas where palm trees do not grow, hand willow or yew are substituted. Those trees of German origin refer to Palm Sunday on Western Sunday and in Britain it may be called Whew Sunday.

April 17 is Good Friday. It was at that long ago Passover feast that Jesus and the disciples ate unleavened bread from which stems the custom of hot cross buns, some claim.

Today's woman should be informed, prepared

Many wives do all the family business and may do none. Neither is a good situation. It is important for both partners in a marriage to have a good knowledge of family affairs. Today's women should be informed, knowledgeable, competent and want of all prepared for tomorrow.

It is a good idea to know where all insurance policies (life, automobile, home, health) are kept, when premiums are due, the amount of the premium, where payable, the name of the company, policy numbers and the person to contact about them.

All savings and checking accounts should be known by both. It's surprising how many bank accounts are never claimed after a death because the heirs didn't know of their existence or didn't know their exact location.

Both partners should know when mortgages or lease payments are due, their amount and where they are payable, as well as knowing about installment payments on equipment, where paying the payment due may cause repossession.

Couples should be sure to know where each other's wills are kept and what lawyer, if any, has a copy.

Insurance policies, tax returns, bank records, receipts, bills, copies of wills, guarantees and warranties, financial plans, account books, inventories, net worth statements, health records and employment records should be kept in a home business file.

Birth certificates, marriage certificates, citizenship papers, passports, original copies of wills, business agreements, deeds and titles, bonds, investment receipts, inventories and insurance policies should be kept in a safe deposit box.

Plantain valuable medicinal herb

By Linda Olsson

Plantain can be found anywhere by the roadside, on lawn, in parks, between paving. It has been called white man's foot because it has cropped up wherever settlers or travellers have trampled the soil.

Plantain grows from a small rhizome which sends out long, yellowish roots. The leaves are arranged in a rosette. Each leaf is broad, oval, thick, smooth and ribbed. The flower spikes rise straight up on long stalks. The flowers are tightly packed against the stem. The seeds that follow can be used as food for tame birds.

Plantain has long been recognized as an important medicinal herb. It was listed as one of the most sacred herbs of the Saxons. For simple first aid, the mashed up leaves will stop the bleeding of minor cuts, hasten healing of sores and skin rashes and drive out head lice and bed bugs.

A poultice of crushed plantain leaves should be applied and used in combination with draining plantain tea for relief of pain. Crushed plantain leaves can be applied for relief of insect bites, nettle stings, eczema and burns.

For a lotion for itching third or even open, make an infusion from pouring one ounce of boiling water onto one ounce of chopped leaves and cleaned roots. Allow to stand 10 minutes. The infusion can also be taken one-half cupful at a time three or four times a day for diarrhea and as a mild astringent.

As a food source, plantain is excellent and readily available. Chopped plantain leaves can be added to lettuce salad, soups and stews. As a cooked vegetable, serve baked plantain leaves with butter or vinegar.

For a special diet, try plantain in white wine. You will need 3 Tbsp. butter, 3 lbs. chopped plantain leaves, 1 tsp. mustard seed, 1 cup dry white wine, 1 tsp. salt, 1 tsp. pepper and 1 tsp. Sugar.

Melt the butter in a heavy skillet. Add the leaves and toss until well coated. Drain the mustard seed and add. Cook, stirring occasionally, for 10 minutes. Add wine, salt and pepper. Bring to a boil, cover and simmer 10 minutes. Remove the leaves and add flour to the juice in the skillet. Stir to make a smooth, creamy sauce. Pour over the greens and serve.
